Technical Appendix

Technical Appendix

- The results of this opinion poll are based upon a representative sample of 1,545 eligible Irish voters aged 18 years +.
- A separate questionnaire was produced for each of three regions to take the three separate European Election constituencies into account. The number of interviews upon which the representative samples of eligible voters in each constituency is based is as follows:

Dublin Constituency	521
Midlands-North-West	513
South Constituency	511

- As such, the results for each constituency can be deemed to be accurate to within plus or minus 4.5 percentage points at the 95% confidence level.
- Fieldwork was conducted over the period 3rd – 14th May, 2014 with interviewing carried out at the Behaviour & Attitudes Computer Aided Telephone Interviewing (CATI) Unit at Milltown House in Dublin.
- Interviewing was conducted across all electoral constituencies in the country with households selected for interview by way of Random Digit Dialling (RDD).
- The sample is split across RDD landline numbers and RDD mobile telephone numbers, so as to ensure that individuals living in landline only households, mobile only households, and households with both a landline and mobile telephone are represented in their correct proportions.

Technical Appendix

- The subsequent survey results are weighted to reflect the known demographic profile of Irish adults, utilising the most recently published census population estimates from the Central Statistics Office (CSO).
- All aspects of the survey, including the Party Support adjustment factor, are implemented in accordance with the technical and ethical guidelines set down by the Association of Irish Market Research Organisations (AIMRO) and the European Society of Opinion & Market Research (ESOMAR).

Midlands North West European Constituency – Interpretation and Analysis

A four seat constituency, Midlands North West sprawls from Donegal in the North down to Galway and Mayo in the West, and into Laois Offaly in the Midlands. Given the geographical spread of the constituency, both Fine Gael and Fianna Fáil are running two candidates, with each emanating from different ends of the constituency.

Based on today's figures, Lorraine Higgins of the Labour Party, along with the Independent candidate Ronan Mullen, are likely to be eliminated relatively early in the proceedings.

Regardless of how these, and indeed subsequent transfers pan out, Mairead McGuinness of Fine Gael and Luke "Ming" Flanagan are both in a very strong position to take the first and second seats respectively. Indeed, McGuinness may well make it over the line on the first count. Her vote is very strong across all socio demographic groupings, as well as in the Northern and Midlands areas of the constituency.

Flanagan's appeal over-index's amongst male voters, but also holds up well across the broad 18 – 54 year old age band. While his support peaks at 23% in the Western part of the constituency, he also performs well in the Midlands, and indeed amongst supporters of most of the mainstream political parties.

It seems very unlikely at this stage that there are two Fine Gael seats in the constituency, and Jim Higgins is likely to be eliminated in or around the 2nd or 3rd count, with McGuinness and, to a lesser extent, Harkin and Flanagan benefitting from his transfers.

Midlands North West European Constituency – Interpretation and Analysis

From Fianna Fáil's perspective, Thomas Byrne and Pat The Cope Gallagher are neck and neck on 1st preferences, with close to a quota between them. Based on today's figures, if Byrne was eliminated before Pat the Cope, 60% of his transfers would go to Gallagher, leaving the Donegal based candidate in strong contention for the 3rd or 4th seat.

If, however, Gallagher is eliminated first, his 2nd preferences will haemorrhage across the board, with Mairead McGuinness picking up as many of them as would his running mate Byrne. In such a scenario, Byrne would likely lose out, with Fianna Fáil winning no seats at all in this constituency.

If this pattern of voting unfolded in next week's election, the likely end result would be a seat for McGuinness of Fine Gael and the Independent Luke Ming Flanagan, along with Matt Carthy of Sinn Féin and Marian Harkin, Independent.

If, however, Fianna Fáil can improve upon its dual candidate transfer strategy over the next week, Pat the Cope Gallagher could well take the 3rd seat, leaving Marian Harkin and Matt Carthy in a battle royale for the last one.

Dublin European Constituency – Interpretation and Analysis

Reduced to just a three seat constituency, Dublin will arguably be the most hard fought of all Euro constituencies next week.

A quarter of all potential voters in this constituency remain undecided as to how they will cast their vote on Election Day. The fact that this undecided bloc is heavily skewed towards potential female voters may well have a bearing on the outcome of the final seat, assuming of course the undecideds vote at all.

Based upon today's Poll, Lynn Boylan of Sinn Féin is in a strong position to top the Poll next Friday, at in or around 19% of the 1st preference vote. Boylan's vote is heavily biased towards male voters, those from a skilled or semi-skilled manual working background and actually peaks amongst 35-54 year olds.

Boylan will also be pleased to note that as many as a fifth of those voters who describe themselves as Labour Party voters in more general terms also intend to give her their first preference.

Brian Hayes of Fine Gael is also in a very strong position, garnering 16% of 1st preferences in our Poll. Hayes performs particularly well amongst female voters and those from a middle to upper socio economic background.

The Fine Gael contender also leads the field in the South Dublin County and Dun Laoghaire - Rathdown geographical regions.

Dublin European Constituency – Interpretation and Analysis

Regardless of how transfer patterns pan out on the day of the count, both Boylan for Sinn Féin and Hayes for Fine Gael look set to take the first two of the Dublin European constituency seats.

A review of 1st preference voting intentions across the remaining candidates then shows a tight tussle for the third seat, with Mary Fitzpatrick of Fianna Fáil, Eamon Ryan of the Green Party, Independent Nessa Childers, Brid Smith of the People Before Profit Alliance, and even Paul Murphy of the Socialist Party all still very much in contention.

As things stand, Emer Costello is in danger of being eliminated during the early stages of the count, with Brian Hayes of Fine Gael the single greatest recipient of her transfers at that stage.

A key turning point in the count would then likely arise following the elimination of Costello and the lower placed candidates.

Based on today's figures, either Brid Smith or Paul Murphy would be eliminated on the following count. If Brid Smith is eliminated first, Paul Murphy would benefit disproportionately from her transfers, leaving him in contention for the final seat at least until the 5th or 6th count.

If, however, Paul Murphy is eliminated before Brid Smith, a large proportion of his transfers will convert to Lynn Boylan of Sinn Féin, with Smith only benefitting marginally.

Dublin European Constituency – Interpretation and Analysis

Regardless of the order in which either of Smith or Murphy is eliminated, however, neither would likely pick up the last seat at the end of the day.

Indeed, if the results of the Poll were replicated precisely on Election Day, we would see Lynn Boylan and Brian Hayes elected comfortably, with Mary Fitzpatrick of Fianna Fáil taking the final seat ahead of Nessa Childers on the last count.

In reality, there is no way of predicting at this stage the outcome of the final seat, with any one of the aforementioned five candidates still very much in the running.

Q.1a

And which of these candidates would you give your second preference to in the European Parliament Election?

South European Constituency – Interpretation and Analysis

The South constituency is also a vast one, encompassing swathes of the so-called Greater Dublin Area such as Wicklow and Wexford, across to Limerick and Clare, swooping down to Cork and Kerry.

As is the case in the Midlands North West constituency, the vast geographical constituency footprint has led both Fianna Fáil and Fine Gael to run multiple candidates. In this instance, however, Fine Gael appears to have struck the perfect balance between type of candidate and his/her electoral heartland within the broader constituency.

Fianna Fáil's dual candidate strategy has, meanwhile, singularly failed, if only by virtue of the vote catching phenomenon that is Brian Crowley.

Of all three European constituencies, Euro South appears the most clear cut with regard to predicting the allocation of seats by party.

As such, Brian Crowley of Fianna Fáil is set to top the Poll at in or around a third of all 1st preference cast, and will be comfortably returned to the European Parliament. At a surface level, Fianna Fáil might be criticised for failing to formulate an effective vote splitting strategy between Crowley and Kieran Hartley , whereby the combined Fianna Fáil vote of 36% would be more evenly split between the two candidates on the 1st count.

Closer examination of the Poll findings reveals, however, that the Crowley vote, as always, is in large part a personal one, with just 13% of his surplus likely to transfer to Hartley on the 2nd count.

South European Constituency – Interpretation and Analysis

Indeed, an analysis of Brian Crowley's vote by stated support of the various parties in a General Election scenario indicates that a quarter of all core Fine Gael voters identified indicate they will vote for Crowley in the European Election – proof positive of the personal nature of his support base.

Sean Kelly of Fine Gael leads his party ticket in the constituency, garnering 17% of all 1st preferences in today's Poll. Kelly is performing particularly well amongst the male electorate, and indeed within the younger (18–34 years) cohort. Kelly's support is also well spread across the entire geographical reach of the constituency, and the fact that he is currently attracting around a quarter of the Labour candidate's transfers would suggest that he is set to be elected in or around the 3rd count next Friday.

There is then clearly a second seat for Fine Gael in the constituency with Deirdre Clune currently out-polling Simon Harris by just 2 percentage points. The only question at this stage appears to be which of the two candidates makes it over the line on Friday.

The party has certainly split the constituency well between the two candidates at a regional level, with Clune currently sitting on 19% support in Cork and Kerry, while Harris is on 22% in the South Eastern region.

As it currently stands, Deirdre Clune would be elected over Simon Harris, and Harris might best be advised to expand his general canvassing activities westward if he is to over-take Clune.

South European Constituency – Interpretation and Analysis

Meanwhile, Liadh ni Riada of Sinn Féin is in a relatively strong position on 14% of the 1st preference vote. Her support holds up well across all socio demographic groupings, and is actually strongest in the older (35 years+) age categories. The Sinn Féin hopeful is strongest in Cork and Kerry at 17%, but is also polling well in all other regions.

She is also performing respectably with regard to 2nd preference transfers from other candidates, and appears likely to be elected on the day.

In summary, therefore, the most likely outcome for the South European Constituency next Friday the 23rd of May is a seat for Brian Crowley of Fianna Fáil, Sean Kelly of Fine Gael, and Liadh ni Riada of Sinn Féin. The final seat will then go to Fine Gael. Currently, Deirdre Clune is the favourite, although Simon Harris could still prevail depending on the effectiveness of his final week's campaigning.

Local Government Elections – Interpretation & Analysis

While most commentary over the last number of months has understandably focused on the likely outcome of the European Elections, we are also of course voting in the Local Government Elections on the same day.

Traditionally, the Electorate has construed Local Elections as an opportunity to pass comment/judgement on the Government of the day.

As such, the individual party support levels captured in Local Elections are by no means a predictor of the subsequent General Election results. Having said that, most of the parties will be using the Locals to 'seed' prospective candidates for the next General Election.

In the 2009 Local Elections, Fine Gael won 32% of the first preference vote nationwide. Not only were they the biggest party on the day, they also realised a significant seat bonus, winning 39% (340) of all seats on their 32% vote.

Based on today's poll figures, the Fine Gael Local Government vote is likely to decline to around 25%. Depending on how transfers pan out thereafter, the party looks set to lose scores of seats this time around.

24% of the Electorate state in today's poll indicated that they are inclined to vote for Independent candidates in the Local Elections, although the extent to which they do so on the day will of course be heavily influenced by the number and calibre of independent candidates actually running in their own area. Nevertheless, we are likely to see an increase in the 16% share of vote the Independents attracted in 2009, with a corresponding uplift in seats won.

Local Government Elections – Interpretation & Analysis

Fianna Fáil's vote in the Locals, currently at 22% in today's poll, is reasonably close to the 25% it actually achieved in 2009. The Party should therefore perform creditably in comparison with the 2009 Election, and build from there towards the General Election.

The big winners, however, are likely to be Sinn Féin. In 2009, that party captured 7% of first preferences in the Local Government Elections, and just 6% of all seats.

Today, 17% of the Electorate indicate they will vote for Sinn Féin candidates in the Locals. Coupled with the fact that the Party is now a lot more transfer friendly than it was five years ago, we can expect the Party to double its representation at a local level, come Friday 23rd.

Finally, the Labour Party is facing into a torrid election, at both a Local and European Constituency level. 7% of respondents in today's poll tell us they are likely to grant Labour their first preference vote in the Locals. This is just under half the share of vote garnered in 2009.

The key question will be whether Eamon Gilmore will face a leadership challenge in the immediate aftermath of these elections as so many commentators are already predicting.

Party Support Adjustment Factor: Technical Note

- Predicting election results on the basis of poll data is not an exact science. All the evidence shows that support for individual parties can swing dramatically in the period between elections- very often outside the bounds of historic election results.
- What to do in these circumstances? Most polling companies in Britain and Ireland publish their raw survey results as an index of fluctuations in the emotional mood of voters. They also build in an adjustment based on a number of factors. Where we have reports of how people voted in the last general election as well as how they intend to vote in the next one we can use these data to model the likely level of swing from the last election results.
- We then add back in the forecasts of voters who have not voted last time or do not answer that particular question.
- Finally we take into account each individuals stated likelihood of voting in a forthcoming General Election.
- This is the basis of the adjusted voting forecast in Behaviour & Attitudes polls.
